

Dome Gold Mines

Oct 28th 2013

Dome Gold Mines trades above IPO price, Fiji focus

Dome Gold Mines (ASX: DME) hit the ASX boards less than a week ago following an IPO priced at $0.20, with the company last trading at a 5% premium at $0.21.

Under the IPO Dome raised $1,042,000 by the issue of 5,210,000 fully paid ordinary shares. When the company first traded, it had 29.7 million quoted securities.

The company will focus on three tenements within a small geographic area within Fiji, and adding interest the tenements all have distinct types of ore - and adding further interest - each tenement has a direct analogue elsewhere within the country.

Dome's flagship is the Nasivi Delta Tenement (SPL1454), which covers the floodplain and delta of the Nasivi River where it meets the sea on the north coast of Fiji's main island of Viti Levu.

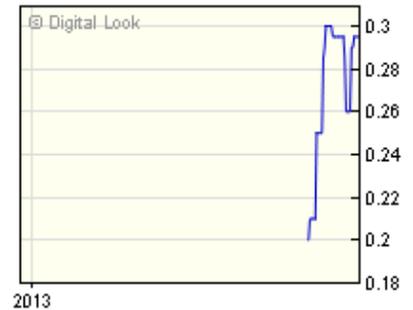

In this area there is a large accumulation of deltaic sediments, such as gravel, sand, silt and clay that have been washed down the Nasivi River from their source rocks in the mountains to the south.

Those source rocks include the volcanic sequence that hosts the Emperor Gold Mine at Vatukoula and detrital gold is present in the Nasivi Delta sediments.

Price: A$0.29

Market Cap: A$8.76M

1 Year Share Price Graph

Share Information

Code: DME

Listing: ASX

Sector: General Mining

Website: www.domegoldmines.com.au

Company Synopsis:

Dome Gold Mines (ASX: DME) is focused on minerals exploration in Fiji, and currently has three projects prospective for precious and base metals, along with some magnetite sand exposure.

Author:

Proactive Investors +61 2 9299 5001

action@proactiveinvestors.com.au